

The New Jockey Club.

NEW YORK, February 8.—Special telegram to Inter-Ocean—The new jockey club has at last been organized and named. It will be known simply as the jockey club. Articles of incorporation were drawn up to-day and forwarded to the Secretary of State at Albany, and within a few days the new club will be a legally incorporated body.

Among those who signed the articles of incorporation were William C. Whitney, Colonel O. H. Payne and F. K. Sturgis. Mr. Keene, at the first meeting of the horsemen, intimated that Mr. Whitney sympathized with the movement. The ex-Secretary of the Navy is fond of horses, but has hitherto paid little attention to the thoroughbreds. It is not probable that he will go actively into racing. The other names to the articles were: Perry Belmont, Colonel W. P. Thompson, J. B. Haggin, John Hunter, A. J. Cassatt, James Galway and Dr. G. L. Knapp. The names of J. O. Donner, August Belmont and Pierre Lorillard do not appear because of the legal requirement that signers of incorporation papers shall be present at the signing.

In order to effect an incorporation of the club it is necessary to name a board of directors and stewards in the papers. The following were named as stewards of the Jockey Club for 1894: August Belmont, J. R. Keene, John Hunter, Colonel W. P. Thompson, J. O. Donner, F. K. Sturgis and Dr. G. L. Knapp. "It is not probable that there will be any president," said one of the incorporators. "The policy adopted by the English Jockey Club, of having the senior steward act, avoids any jealousy or ill feeling. I think the English plan will be followed."

The Jockey Club will hold its first meeting next Saturday at the offices of the Board of Control in the Cumberland. The main business will probably be the consideration of the by-laws which have been partially formulated. A number of gentlemen who have expressed a desire to join the club will probably be elected at this meeting. Mr. Keene said to-day that there was not a gentleman named as a steward who would not resign in favor of any other who would be more acceptable to the racing association, in order to effect perfect harmony.

Roller's East St. Louis Cup.

It is a trite and oft-proven saying that shearers go out for wool and come back shorn. One of the most graphic incidents of this kind is described in a letter from East St. Louis to the Tribune. We all know Roller from the time he started in the harness-horse ranks as assistant trainer in Jesse Yereance's stable at Fleetwood, some eight years ago, and gravitated to Guttenburg as understudy with the German Confederacy. We quote from the letter: "Jim' Shields and 'Billy' Roller arrived with a stable of Guttenburg cracks that were educated in the right schools, as their owners thought, for East St. Louis racing. The Eastern crowd were surprised when they saw the Egyptians gather around Shields and Roller and look at them with the air of Fiji Islanders, who had captured two juicy and succulent subjects for a holiday feast. It is such a sad tale that I will cut it short.

"The two innocents from Guttenburg were cajoled and petted by the Egyptians, so that they did not object to the smaller losses in the first two races in which their horses started, as they were preparing to annihilate them when Dalsyrian started. The long-looked-for day arrived, with track, betting and all other things in favor of the East. Everyone of the Eastern crowd played Dalsyrian as if the race were over. There was no trouble in placing money, as we accepted the odds posted, for it looked like stealing the money. Shields and Roller had the wires to the pool-rooms all over the country hot with messages to get on to the good thing, as it was a 'cinch' with a big 'C.' When the horses went to the post the odds on Dalsyrian went up again, but Griffin was in the saddle, and both Roller and Shields were cursing their luck because they had no more money to bet. When the flag fell a cry of dismay went up from the Eastern crowd as Dalsyrian was left at the post. Shields and Roller clung to each other, to keep from falling, as both looked apoplectic. Their voices failed them as their visions of opulence vanished.

"Id's grooked races like dose vat ruins der business," Roller ejaculated.

"Yer kin jest bet yer life," said Shields.

"Led's ged oud," said Roller.

"Yer kin bet yer life; jest as soon as I kin get some dust by wire," said Shields.

"Griffin, the jockey, borrowed $2 to get back to St. Louis. If proper connections can be made and the roads get good, look out for the arrival of some travel-stained and weary turfmen who are anxious to return to New York. The new jockey club has a chance to reform Gloucester, Clifton or Guttenburg, but it's 1,000,000 to 1 that East St. Louis cannot be reformed without double-barreled shot-guns and gatlings."

SECRETARY HOPPER of the Latonia Jockey Club, in describing the collapse of Colonel Pate's race track in the City of Mexico, says: "The first day the track opened I never saw a better class crowd at a race track anywhere. The President of the Republic and all the swell society of Mexico were present. Everybody in the City of Mexico who is anybody has a fine turnout, and their carriages and harness are imported from Paris. Society went the first day simply because it was fashionable to do so. There were about 7,500 people there the first day, but the second day there were not over 300. In fact, after the first day there were never more than 300 on the ground. The last day I was at the track by actual count there were 142 people on the grounds."

J. J. McCAFFERTY will only race at the far East during the coming season.

This is not a culling out sale, as most sales are, but a closing out sale of some of the choicest and most select lot of broodmares and colts ever offered at auction in California. All mares of the To Kalon Stock Farm have been selected after carefully testing their merits; they are all mares of fine individuality, free from blemishes and all possess natural speed at either trot or pace; while pedigree has been considered, the prime quality sought was natural speed inheritance. A number of these colts and some of the aged horses are entered in rich stakes and purses, and if they go into trained hands they are sure to be money winners. Trainers who are looking for fast Trotters and Pacers, should not fail to attend this sale. You can take morning train for Napa, attend the sale and return the same evening. Train stops at Fair grounds. For further information send for catalogue.
